

Guide to Homeopathy Materials

Taubman Health Sciences Library

This guide was compiled to facilitate locating Taubman Health Sciences Library's homeopathic materials. Many items from this collection have been scanned, and are available on line. The search interface for the documents available online is at the following URL: <https://quod.lib.umich.edu/h/homeop/>.

The print materials in the Homeopathy Collection are stored in various places including: Buhr Shelving Facility at Green and Hoover Streets, the Serials and Microfilms department on the second floor of the south section of the Hatcher Graduate Library, Health Sciences Remote Shelving, Special Collections, Hatcher Graduate Library, and Bentley Historical Library. The subjects highlighted by the Guide are presented as illustrations of various topics that are available in the collection and by no means constitute an exhaustive list of materials.

This guide was created prior to the renovation of the Taubman Health Sciences Library and may not accurately reflect the current location of materials. All items in the guide should be findable using Library Catalog Search.

History

The homeopathy collection at the University of Michigan originated in the holdings of the Homeopathic Medical College, first established as part of the University in Ann Arbor in 1875 and conducted concurrently with the allopathic Medical School until 1922. There was also a Homeopathic Hospital in existence locally from 1879 until 1891. For a more complete history see:

- "The Homeopathic Medical College." In: The University of Michigan: An Encyclopedic Survey, edited by Wilfred B. Shaw, vol. 2, pp. 1003-1012. Ann Arbor: University of Michigan Press, 1994. (Also available electronically)
- The Making of the University of Michigan 1817-1992, by Howard H. Peckham, edited and updated by Margaret L. Steneck and Nicholas H. Steneck. Ann Arbor: University of Michigan, Bentley Historical Library, 1997.

The collection itself contains items dating from the mid-1800's to the present day. Of particular interest is the Bradford Homeopathy Collection, which is composed of 1027 pamphlets that detail 75 years of the history and development of the field of homeopathic medicine. Along with the holdings of the former Homeopathic Library, these pamphlets constitute one of the most complete collections on the subject.
